How Electromagnetic Stimulation Therapy developed

Over recent decades, medical attention focused on non-invasive treatment methods and much has been learnt about the impact of magnetic fields in the treatment of a wide range of ailments, including injuries and chronic diseases.

Along with developments in mathematics, physics and technology has resulted a new generation of medical devices which has significantly widened the effectiveness of variable magnetic fields in medicine. The Viofor JPS System is at the forefront of this new generation.

Developed over the past fifteen years in Europe the world's leading authorities in the application of magnetic fields in medicine, it is a breakthrough in the treatment of pain and helps to reverse the symptoms of many major conditions.

Conventional electromagnetic therapy systems utilise much higher induction levels with repetitive wave patterns at a set frequency; the high induction levels quickly activate the body's defence mechanisms. The body tends to adapt to the repetitive stimulus, reducing the effectiveness of the treatment.

In comparison, in electromagnetic stimulation, induction levels are much lower, wave patterns are complex and variable and frequencies are combined to create a complex pattern thereby generating a slow-changing, low induction magnetic field that is tuned to work with the body's natural resonating frequencies, speeding up the body's natural healing process.

The Viofor JPS is so effective that it is now widely used within the health systems of many European countries, including Germany and France.

The Science Bit

Simply put electromagnetic stimulation [EMS] therapy improves the way your body works.

It makes the biological processes more effective for example, it enhances the circulation of your to all the parts of your body.

Blood carries oxygen and nutrients to the cell structures which make up the organs and muscles. Without enough oxygen and nutrients, the cells -and then the whole body -stop functioning. You probably won't die - but you won't feel good!

For example

Increased oxygenation of your tissues helps to fight infection and strengthens your immune system, speeding up recovery of damaged tissues and the mending of bone fractures.

Improved blood circulation encourages deep, relaxing sleep to relieve insomnia, muscle tension, tension headaches and migraine.

It also reduces or stops pain.

In a European society with millions of people suffering from back pain, muscle and joint pain, arthritis and diseases of the nervous system, many exacerbated by the very society in which we live, we need to learn how to fight back

With the Viofor JPS System, now you can

EMS Treatment & how YOU can benefit

Your treatment would take place on an electromagnetic bed.

First of all, your whole body would be treated on the full bed. Then, a smaller, specialised appliance would be used on the area most affected. A session takes around half an hour and you would stay fully clothed throughout

The treatment is totally painless and free from any negative side effects And, with its low induction levels which correspond to the strength of the earth's magnetic field, it is suitable for everyone from babies to the very old and infirm.

Whatever your condition, you should also experience significant pain relief
